BRITISH CONSULS TO MEXICO

To Be Accredited to the Carranza Government Hereafter.

Great Britain has arranged to accredit its consular officers in Gen. Carranza's territory to Gen. Carranza in the same way as the United States has accredited Consul Silliman. The arrangement in no way constitutes political recognition, but makes possible a continuance of business relations between the British consular officers and the Carranza government. Gen. Carranza recently announced he would recognize foreign consuls unaccredited to him.

The arrangement was made after conference here between Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, and Eliseo Arredondo, Gen. Carranza's Washington press agent. The British consul at Vera Cruz will be given a letter addressed to the "First Chief of the Constitutional Government."

Authoritative Statement Expected.

It was announced today that when the Southern Commercial Congress meets at Charleston, S. C., in December the question of national defense will be an item of the program. Inasmuch as several government officials will be in attendance at the congress, it is expected that some authoritative statement on the subject will be made. To illustrate the subject of coast and harbor defense, the port of Charleston will be used as a type and as an object lesson from the viewpoint of experts in fortifications.

Report Mediation a Success.

John A. Moffit and James A. Smyth, federal conciliators sent to Bayonne July 22, wired the Department of Labor today:

"Mediation a success. 8,500 men return to work. Strike ended."

Her Consensus.

From the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

In spite of scoldings, Helen persisted in running away from home. One day, after a longer absence than usual, her mother asked:

"Helen, dear, does not your conscience trouble you when you are running away from home?"

"Oh, yes, mamma," that little voice is always saying: "Run faster, faster, Helen; your mother is after you!"

Trainmen Give Outing.

"Satan never takes a vacation," thundered the evangelist.

"Well," retorted an unregenerate listener, "he's more used to heat than we are."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"GRUMPY" PAYS VISIT TO THE STAR OFFICE

Battles and Diplomacy and Other Things All Take a Back Seat.

Imperial Ambassador From Dogland Proves Himself Dignified But Friendly Envoy.

As a special representative from the imperial government of dogland, "Grumpy," five months old, of the imperial tribe of bulldogs, visited The Star office today and made himself very much at home.

It scarcely matters who brought "Grumpy" into the building. The man who brought him was hitched to the other end of the leash. A very disagreeable institution, the leash, by the way, but "Grumpy" was "it."

"I lead that fellow around," was what "Grumpy" seemed to say. It was a big adventure, going up in the elevator to the newsroom, where a lot of men were sitting around at desks pounding typewriters; where other men were sitting at a table besting notes upon his head, absorbed in the contemplation of "scraps of paper," and where the mighty editor, the corner of the room, directed the energies of those who discuss everything between heaven and earth, the fate of men and nations.

"Grumpy" holds the stage. It must be confessed the fate of men and likewise of nations took a back seat for a while, when "Grumpy" came in. He was the center of attraction, by the divine right of being a perfect example of what he was supposed to be. All the reporters stopped work on Germany and the remainder of the world and paid strict attention to the representative of Dogland, not six months out of the Kingdom That Nobody Knows.

He was patted on the back like a good fellow, while those reporters especially "doggy" bent the knee in homage to his paw upon his head. His "points" were discussed pro and con, but he knew little and cared less about that. The pneumatic tubes, industrious windy "devils" of the modern newspaper office, claimed a great share of his attention. There are lots of funny things in a newspaper office. A petition to excuse one member of the staff from his duties for the day in order that he may play with the dog was circulated and signed. But it struck a rock when it hit the city editor. The C. E. likes dogs, but he likes his reporters better.

Visits Sanctum Sanctorum.

"Grumpy" proved to be a sort of big brother in a puppy. Everybody from one of "the" editors to the office boys patted him, and one of "the" editors even scooped him out of the chair in which he had decided to take a sleep, and carried him away to the sanctum of the front office to show him to the editor. Dog nor man can go no farther than that in a newspaper office.

When they finally stopped bothering "Grumpy" he came back to the news room to look over for some place to sleep. When a fellow is only five months old he's got to have plenty of sleep, boys that's all there is to it. This early-to-bed-and-early-to-rise stuff may be all right for human men, but when a fellow is only five months old, he's got to have plenty of the old sleep.

"Grumpy" looked around the office for a good chair to make his bed, and decided there was none better in the room than that of the news editor. The news editor was out of town on vacation, so there was plenty of room for "Grumpy" to sleep in, if not exactly to step into, his shoes.

Shame Hidden From World.

Before the hour of noon sounded "Grumpy" got into disgrace over some small matters. Such little things are always happening. But since the newspaper men are his friends, of course, nothing will appear in the paper about it, except this bare mention of the fact. Because it is a matter of public record, you know, and we've simply got to print it, that's all, "Grumpy."

Whereupon "Grumpy" retired with a hurt expression to the cavernous depth of the closet beneath the copy desk, where copy paper is kept, and curling himself up on the news, went to sleep. But not before a member of the staff had told him that a large plate of ice cream was waiting for him. So he licked his chops, wagged his tail and went away to dreamland. When a fellow is only five months old he's got to have plenty of sleep, that's all there is to it.

HELD FOR OBSERVATION.

Carlo Rosso Arrested on Suspicion His Mind Is Affected.

Carlo Rosso, fifty years old, of Koppel, Beaver county, Pa., was one of the many strangers who appeared in the vicinity of the Capitol this morning. He attracted the attention of Lieut. Cantwell of the Capitol police force and was arrested on suspicion that his mind was affected.

Rosso told the police that he came here to see the President. He said enemies had been following him and prevented him from getting employment, and he thought the President could put a stop to the annoyances. He was taken to Washington Asylum Hospital for observation as to his mental condition.

Special Correspondence of The Star.

ROCKVILLE, Md., July 28.—Montgomery county republicans of all factions today held a get-together conference here yesterday, it being one of the largest gatherings of members of the party held in the county in recent years. Complete harmony prevailed, as well as enthusiasm over the prospect of success in the state this fall.

Byrn.

Conference of Clubwomen.

A conference, having for its object a coalition of the various organizations of the county so as to prevent overlapping of work, was held in the courthouse under the auspices of the civic committee of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs. It was presided over by Mrs. Merritt O. Chance of Kensington, chairman of the committee, and the organizations represented included the Social Service League, Anti-Saloon League, Just Government League, Montgomery County Federation of Home and School Associations, Suffrage Association, Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs, Montgomery County Orange. There were also present representatives of the United States Department of Agriculture, the Maryland Agricultural College, the county school board and the county board of health.

The objects for which the conference was called were discussed at length and it was finally voted to authorize Mrs. Chance to appoint a committee to issue a call for a convention of delegates from the various county organizations.
